

KATE T. STRINITZ, July 20, 1965 at the Sam Rodia Memorial at the Towers, the day of his funeral:

I am not entitled to represent to day Bill Cartwright and Nick King, who were not able to attend; but I would like to remember them now, because to them we actually owe the preservation of the Towers.

WE HAVE NOT TO SAY FAREWELL TO SAM, because Sam is forever alive in these Towers. When he built them he loaded each part of the construction, each rod of steel, the rock, the shell and each shining splinter of glass with his vital power and energy. A natural energy which never will be exhausted because each ray of sunlight <sup>re</sup> loads it again with natural energy and sparkling life.
